

Bio

Patrick Marshall is a 25-year-old Male currently living in Salt Lake City, Utah. Upon graduating from Texas A&M University in 2013 with a Bachelors in Communications he was recruited by Union Pacific Railroad to Manage Yard Operations across Texas' Dallas/Fort Worth Metroplex for 3 years.

Where Patrick thrived in the realm of operations, he also found a love for technology, development and programming. Coming from a world where merely maintaining and sustaining was the name of the game; creating and building was all he wanted to do. In that, he left Dallas for Salt Lake City to give birth to his aspirations by enrolling in DevPoint Labs' most recent 3-month long web-development and programming cohort.

Bringing almost a decade of management and leadership experience, the knowledge of process improvement within a Fortune 150 company and the natural ability to spot process deficiencies into his transition into technology, the course has been a thriving success, and the programming/framework skills attained can all be found in the following resume.

Patrick seeks a challenging position that will further his experiences with a values based company that prides itself in the same desire to stimulate and challenge its employees and students, harness sound moral conviction and maintain a healthy desire to affect sociotechnical systems across the world. It's apparent that, given IBM's social mission, they too strive for the same objectives. That is why Patrick is seeking the internship position for Software Developer.
